

JOB OFFER

GREEK NATIVE SPEAKER – RESEARCH ANALYST

ADA Economics is an economic and political boutique think-tank based in London.

We work with institutional investors and non-financial corporations to help them manage the risks and opportunities that arise from economic conditions and changes in government policy.

Our focuses are global macroeconomics & CSME's internationalisation.

ADA Economics is currently running a small data project in Greece.

Our research will focus on the Greek economy and Greek citizens' opinion on the European Union.

We are looking for a couple of students to do some field research and for some assistance to Raffaella Tenconi, the Managing Director and Head of Research.

The total duration of the contract will be 2 weeks minimum to one month and it is based in Athens.

They will also have to travel around Greece for one week to ten days, in order to collect data.

You must be a native speaker with a very good command of English.

Please note that all applicants must be to demonstrate that they are eligible to work in Greece at the point at which the role commences.

This job is a great opportunity for a student willing to gain professional experience.

No specific degree is needed though for the assistance an undergraduate in law or accounting maybe useful.

Skills:

- highly organised
- excellent communicator
- outgoing personality
- comfortable with approaching people

Starting Date: 8th of May 2017

Salary: EUR 250 /week

Email cv to: admin@adaeconomics.com

